

Poker Bluffing More Than Winning Craps

Contributed by Administrator
Monday, 16 June 2008
Last Updated Monday, 16 June 2008

The best way to know how to bluff is to watch the poker videos on a regular basis. Purchase the videos of the world class series and watch them right from the entry level satellites to the end. Truly 90% of the games played will have bluffs of semi bluffs. To be frank, not a single table in poker is played without bluffs; however, some bluffs win and some bluffs loses.

There is no point in learning how to bluff and eventually staging it in a way that someone notices the bluff before the purpose gets accomplished. There are two main kinds of bluffs, the bluff which accomplishes purpose and the bluff which does not accomplish the purpose. It is better to not bluff than making a bluff that never meets with purpose. Truly bluffing is not a necessity rather it is an option, but getting to know who is bluffing is a necessity and to know who is bluffing one will have to personally know how to bluff in poker. The answer to the interrogation how to bluff is multifaceted; the successful bluffing is dependent upon the position of the bluffer in the table, the strength of the bluffer's pockets, the favorability with which the pockets have worked for the bluffer, the pot odds and the quality of the opponents in the table. The magic of bluff is strongly dependent upon the position and the purpose of bluffing. If the purpose of the bluff is to make the pot splitting with crap hands, then a hilarious playing methodology should be used and ordinary how to bluff ideas never works; however, bluffing with a pot committed hand that is sure to win will be less dangerous because, even if the bluff does not perform, the player will win and if the bluff wins the player will make a better pot split. The purpose of the bluff is very important. The concept of bluffing is lot more than just winning with craps and increasing the winning money; the answer to how to bluff is more detailed, it also encompasses bluffing to have players fold to have less competition, bluffing to have players stay in the game and lot more. In short any kind of fake moves that is done to sustain one is the answer to how to bluff and the one that wins is a quality bluff!