What are poker bluffs? A bluff is a habit, behavior, or physical reaction that makes other players believe what you want them to think about your hand. There are a lot of poker bluffs ideas that is needed for novice and advanced players. Remember, in poker there is going to be a lot of contradictions of result for poker bluffs based on how the bluff is staged. There is no exception to this rule. Experienced pros will give out false tells and manipulate the poker bluffs in a skillful way, but this will be very difficult for new players that do not know how to do it. Poker bluffs can be identified by looking in to the eyes of the person that is bluffing. The purpose of top players wearing a sunglass is to hide what their eyes speak about them. The tells of eyes is not just with one stare, poker bluffs are estimated based on the duration of each stare, the winking of the eyes, the moving of the eyeballs and lot more.

Even if the player is going to hide his eyes with eye glasses, the eyes can still be read. The players should turn around to see the other people in the table to make some mental calculations like counting the number of people still heads up in the table if he is planning to steal the blind. If the player is repeatedly looking to the left very often even if the eyes are covered with the glasses we can figure out he is counting on blind stealing. A lot of such poker bluffs and tells can be identified by reading the eyes and the related activities.

However, the concept of body language and tells is totally unnecessary in online games, where body language is never an element in it. However, to identify poker bluffs in real time games one should learn to identify the chip staking behavior, body posture, serial betting pattern, looking in to hole cards over again in the flop, trembling hands, glancing at chips and lot more. It should also be remembered that some people are experts at poker bluffs that they can exhibit false tells to divert players.

The kind of serial betting pattern and response time can be clubbed together and used to identify poker bluffs in online games too. It all requires a bit of practice. A lot of rail birding of games in the online helps identifying clues of poker bluffs in online games.
